Norwegian Cruise Line Reveals Norwegian Aura, Its Newest Ship Set to Launch in 2027

Norwegian Cruise Line is expanding its fleet in a big way. In late May 2027, the cruise line will debut Norwegian Aura, the longest and largest ship in its history. After an inaugural season in Europe, Norwegian Aura will cross the Atlantic and begin homeporting in Miami in June 2027, sailing seven-day Caribbean itineraries to destinations including Harvest Caye in Belize and the newly enhanced Great Stirrup Cay in the Bahamas.

Norwegian Aura will stretch nearly 1,130 feet in length, weigh in at 169,000 gross tons, and welcome up to 3,840 guests at double occupancy—making her approximately 10 percent larger than Norwegian Aqua and Norwegian Luna. The ship will also introduce Ocean Heights, a brand-new open-air activities complex designed with families in mind.

Currently under construction at the renowned Fincantieri shipyard, Norwegian Aura will feature sophisticated interiors crafted by an impressive lineup of design firms, including AD Associates, Piero Lissoni, Rockwell Group, SMC Design, and Studio Dado.

The ship will feature expanded public spaces, including a pool deck more than 20 percent larger than those on Norwegian Aqua and Norwegian Luna, with added seating, an extra infinity hot tub, a larger LED screen, and more open lounge areas.

Families can enjoy the Kids Aqua Park with splash features and waterslides, while adults can unwind at an expanded Vibe Beach Club, now 15 percent larger with infinity hot tubs and tranquil relaxation spaces.

Norwegian Aura will offer 1,976 staterooms, including an expanded The Haven by Norwegian with 30 percent more suites than previous Prima Class ships.
