Hawaii Travel Update: Kona Storm Impacting the Islands

Hawaii is currently preparing for a significant Kona storm system expected to impact the islands through the end of the week. A Kona storm—named for the southerly winds it produces—can bring heavy rainfall, thunderstorms, and strong winds across the state.

Officials have issued flood watches across multiple islands, with the greatest impact expected from Tuesday through Saturday. Some areas could see over 20 inches of rain, raising concerns about flash flooding, road closures, and localized landslides in mountainous regions.

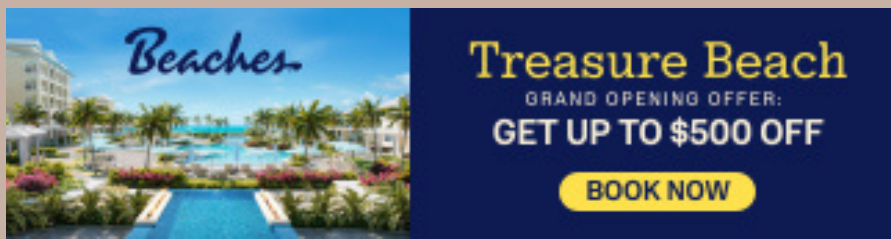

The storm is forecast to affect Kauaʻi and Oʻahu first, before expanding across the island chain later in the week. In preparation, the governor has issued an emergency proclamation to help coordinate state and county response efforts.

Travelers currently in Hawaii or planning trips in the coming days should expect possible flight delays, changes to outdoor activities, and temporary closures of parks or hiking areas in some locations. Officials continue to monitor the storm closely and encourage residents and visitors to stay updated on weather advisories.

At this time, travel to Hawaii is not broadly restricted, but visitors should remain flexible with plans and follow local guidance as the storm develops.

Travel insurance remains one of the most important protections when planning a trip. Circumstances beyond anyone's control—such as severe weather events like the Kona storm currently affecting Hawaii—can quickly disrupt even the most carefully planned vacations.

Unfortunately, many travelers who fully intended to visit Hawaii have lost thousands of dollars due to cancellations and disruptions caused by the storm. Travel protection helps safeguard your investment when the unexpected occurs.

The Caribbean’s premier family all-inclusive resort has just unveiled an exciting new chapter. Beaches Turks & Caicos has officially opened the brand-new Treasure Beach Village, a $150-million expansion set along the world-famous Grace Bay Beach in Turks and Caicos.

Designed with multi-generational travel in mind, the new village introduces 101 spacious suites and villas—including luxurious four-bedroom beachfront residences—along with new dining experiences, a lagoon-style pool with waterslides and swim-up bar, and the resort’s first Starfish Cinema for family movie nights.

Guests staying in Treasure Beach Village also enjoy full access to the resort’s extensive amenities, including dozens of restaurants, the Pirates Island Water Park, unlimited land and water sports, and supervised kids programs, making it an exciting new option for families seeking the ultimate Caribbean getaway.

Saying Good-bye to Waves Season

Waves Season is almost over—and that means the cruise industry's biggest savings event is about to sail away!

Right now, Norwegian Cruise Line is offering its incredible Free at Sea promotion, and the deals are hard to beat. I've already booked several cruises where travelers received FREE airfare for the second guest, an unlimited open bar with paid gratuities, 3 specialty dining experiences, shore excursion credits, and more. Honestly, the airfare savings alone have been staggering.

But these offers won't last much longer.

For more Waves Season cruise deals, visit AdagioDreamVacations.com and schedule a consultation with a dedicated travel advisor before these promotions disappear. Your next cruise vacation could be closer—and more affordable—than you think!
